STATISTICS

OF

CHURCHES IN THE UNITED STATES.

(A.)—BY STATES AND TERRITORIES.
(B.)—BY DENOMINATIONS.

AT THE CENSUSES OF 1870, 1860, AND 1850.

REMARKS ON THE STATISTICS OF CHURCHES.

The statistics of churches contained in the following tables are believed to be substantially exact, and to present a just view of the organization of the several religious denominations found within the United States and of the accommodation for public worship afforded by each.

It was not to be expected or desired that the account taken in the census of the churches of the country should in all cases agree with the statements put forth by religious denominations through their respective official organs. The census has its own proper point of view, and applies in some respects different tests from those known to the compilers of year-books or registers.

A church to deserve notice in the census must have something of the character of an institution. It must be known in the community in which it is located. There must be something permanent and tangible to substantiate its title to recognition. No one test, it is true, can be devised that will apply in all cases, yet, in the entire absence of tests, the statistics of the census will be overlaid with fictitious returns to such an extent as to produce the effect of absolute falsehood. It will not do to say that a church without a church building of its own is, therefore, not a church; that a church without a pastor is not a church; nor even that a church without membership is not a church. There are churches properly cognizable in the census which are without edifices and pastors, and, in rare instances, without a professed membership. Something makes them churches in spite of all their deficiencies. They are known and recognized in the community as churches, and are properly to be returned as such in the census.

On the other hand, there are hundreds of churches borne on the rolls of religious sects having both a legal title to an edifice and a nominal membership, which never gather a congregation together, support no ministry, and conduct none of the services of religion.

Some of the larger religious denominations, either in consequence of their peculiar organization or by reason of special efforts, maintain a careful system of reports and returns, and the statistics of such denominations are accordingly entitled to great consideration.

METHODIST.

Foremost among these is the Methodist church, which, by reason of its episcopal form of government and its scheme of changing periodically the pastors of churches, is always in possession, as nearly as it would be possible to effect, of the true condition of its organization in all parts of the country to a late date. Dead churches are not allowed to encumber its rolls, and consequently the lists of its several branches present their exact strength "for duty." This denomination, therefore, affords a high test of the accuracy of the returns of the census; and, notwithstanding that it presents as much difficulty in enumeration as any other, the general correspondence between the statements embodied in the minutes of the annual conferences of the principal branches of the church, after making allowance for the known strength of certain minor branches which do not publish official returns, and the statistics of the denomination as given in the census, is, taking all the States of the Union together, very decided. The slight differences that exist are sufficiently explained by differences between the dates of the returns and by the different rules of construction and classification which would naturally be adopted in doubtful cases by parties acting independently of each other.

There are other denominations, one or two, notably the Baptist, of great importance, in which an absence of central control in the government of the churches and the want of a thorough system of reports and returns, deprive church statistics of value. It is in respect to these, as a rule, that the discrepancies between the claims of the denomination and the results of the census are greatest. In all such cases full and searching inquiry has been made; the recognized authorities of the churches interested have been freely consulted; and assistant marshals have been called on to explain the discrepancy, and to review their own statements. Hundreds of letters have been written from the Census Office on this subject; thousands of churches have been inquired for; and where differences, after all has been done, still exist, it only remains to be said that if this or that denomination has as many churches as it claims, the agents of the census have not been able to find them.

An analysis of the reports of certain religious denominations, however, is sufficient to explain the discrepancies to the vindication of the census, without further investigation. It is generally found that the aggregate reported by the authorities of the denomination is made up of two classes: first, of churches from which reports have been received up to a recent date, showing an actual organization and an active membership, with church accommodation and a ministry; and, second, of churches, often more numerous, which are deficient in one or all of these respects, in degrees ranging from partial or temporary deprivation to total and habitual destitution. In such cases, the statistics accompanying almost invariably cut in between the highest and lowest figures of the denomination; take in all the churches that are fully officered, organized, and equipped, and add to this number such of the second class as, in spite of deficiencies, answer to the true definition of a church from the point of view of the census, viz, are institutions in the community known and recognized.

BAPTIST.

The discrepancies between the returns of the census and the statistics of the church are greatest in the case of the Baptists.

The census of 1860 showed 11,221 "churches." (a)

The census of 1870 shows 14,474 church organizations; the increase in the decade being certainly as large as could have been expected. The statistics of the church, however, purport to show 17,535 churches in 1870 in the territory covered by the operations of the census, (b,) a difference against the census of 3,061. But reference to the statistics of the same church shows that in 1869 only 14,084 churches were claimed, exclusive of the States of Delaware and Rhode Island, the District of Columbia, and certain Territories; adding in the number claimed in 1870 for the States and Territories not reported in 1869, to wit, 91, we have as the total churches for 1869, 14,175, (c,) or 299 less than the census.

If, therefore, the statement of 17,535 churches for 1870 is correct, there must have been a clear addition of 3,360 in the single year intervening, which would be considerably more than the entire addition claimed for the nine years previous, (2,954,) which is wholly unreasonable and incredible.

Proceeding, however, to analyze the aggregate of 17,535, we find that from only 12,600 churches were reports received during the year for which the statement is made up. For 3,273 the figures were taken from the report of the year previous, in the absence of any later advices; and, for 1,662 more, estimates had to be made, in the absence even of returns a year old.

It will be seen here, as has been above indicated, that the census cuts in between the highest claim of the denomination and the number for which positive data can be shown. And in this the census conforms in an eminent degree to the reason of the case, inasmuch as it must be that many of the churches unreported are still in existence, possessing sufficient activity to justify their return by the assistant marshals, while many undoubtedly have, in the natural course of things, ceased to keep up even a form of life.

Going down from the total of the United States to the totals for States, (still within the same denomination,) we find an even clearer explanation of the same facts. The discrepancies are mainly in the Southern States, where the conditions of society, especially among the freedmen, are such as would account for even larger differences than exist. In Alabama the census reports but 786; the church statistics claim 1,054; but from only 489 of these were reports actually received during the year for which the returns were made up, 445 were taken from the report the year previous, and 120 were obtained purely by estimate. In Arkansas the census reports 463; the church statistics claim 539; but only 122 of these were obtained from the reports of the year 1870, 235 were taken from the report of 1869, and 182 were obtained by estimate. In North Carolina the census reports 951; the church statistics claim 1,235; but of these only 587 are obtained from reports of the year, 228 from reports of the year previous, and 420 by estimate. In Georgia the Census reports 1,364; the church statistics claim 1,946; but in 1869 only 1,478 were claimed, while the minutes of the State Baptist Convention, held at Cartersville April 21 to 24, 1871, show but 1,738, included in which are 225 taken from the minutes of 1869, 59 taken from minutes of 1868, and 250 taken from minutes of conventions held before the war. The comparison might be carried through all the Southern States with much the same results.

(a) The principal inquiry, under the head of Religion, in the schedule of the census law, viz: "Number of churches," is, unfortunately, ambiguous. As the censuses of 1850 and 1860 were taken, it is impossible to feel any assurance, in any particular case, whether church organizations or church edifices are returned in answer to the inquiry, "Number of churches." In preparation for the Ninth Census, this inquiry was divided into "Number of church organizations. Number of church edifices."

(b) The statistics of the Baptist Church for 1870 are presented in their Year-Book for 1871, in the form of a summary by States, and, also, to a great extent, in detail, by associations within each State. Where differences between the total and the items occur they are supposed to be the result of clerical errors in the preparation of the summary, or of typographical errors in printing it, and the detailed accounts have been assumed to be correct. The total number of churches, as given on page 80 of the Year-Book, is 17,745. An accurate compilation, however, of the details, so far as presented, gives 17,527 churches. To these are to be added 7 and 16, the numbers returned, in the summary only, for Delaware and District of Columbia respectively, and 10 for the difference between the total and the items given for West Virginia, which difference, it is supposed, equals the estimated number of churches belonging to the "Free Salvation" and "Indian Creek" associations, not otherwise accounted for, making a sum of 17,560, from which should be deducted the 25 churches claimed in the Indian Territory, as outside the field covered by the operations of the census, leaving 17,535, as stated above.

(c) On page 80 of the Year-Book the total number of churches for 1869 is stated at 15,143. (See preceding note.)

The least impartial consideration of the above facts must convince any one that in the aggregates of this denomination, in the Southern States especially, are included large numbers of congregations "in the bush," properly, it may be, to be reported from a denominational point of view, but hardly to be returned in the census, while there are also included many churches which have been destroyed by the violence of war, or have been merged with other organizations of the same church, or have fallen into hopeless decay, in the natural course of human institutions.

The only one of the Southern States where comparison between the statistics of the census and those of the church, and an analysis of the latter according to the plan above pursued, would induce the belief that the returns of the census, as between the two, were in fault, is the State of Texas, where the conditions attending the recent enumeration were so unfavorable, so almost hopeless, as to prevent the collection of social statistics in any degree satisfactory to the Census Office. The same admission of a failure to fully return the Baptist denomination might seem, at first glance, to be required (though in nothing like the same degree) in respect to the State of Virginia; but a comparison of the results in this State with those for West Virginia establishes the soundness of the statistics of the two States taken together, and justifies the suggestion that the officers charged with the compilation of these statements for denominational purposes have, not unnaturally, failed to divide the churches accurately between the old and the new State.

CONGREGATIONAL.

In respect to the Congregational Church, again, the difference between the statistics of the census and those of the denominational organs is decided, though by no means so extreme, as this denomination has never extended its agencies southward with any considerable success. The denomination claims 3,121; the Census allows 2,887. In this case the difference is partially accounted for (probably to the extent of between 50 and 60) by the later date (within the same year) of the statistics of the denomination. The remaining difference is explained by such facts as those contained in the "Annual Statistics" of the Congregational Quarterly for January, 1871. Nine hundred and three churches only are there stated to have settled pastors; 1,438 have "acting pastors;" 129 are supplied by licentiates and ministers of other denominations; and 651 are "vacant." The differences in respect to this denomination are found mainly at the West, where the large number of churches without either a stated ministry or a "supply," and the large number, also, (often the same churches,) without edifices of their own, afford ample scope for the operation of different rules of construction as to what constitutes a church for census purposes.

The most important discrepancy between the statistics of the denomination and those of the census, within any of the Eastern States, is in the State of Pennsylvania, where the agents of the census report 40 church organizations. The Congregational Quarterly claims 70; 6 only, however, having settled pastors, 31 having "acting pastors," and 33 being "vacant." In the case of 13 of the churches thus reported by the denomination, the Census Office received positive information from the postmasters of the towns or villages where they were said to be severally located that no such churches were in existence. Of the 17 remaining to be accounted for, the Census Office has been able to obtain no information of any kind through correspondence.

In Kentucky, again, the "Quarterly" claims 3 churches. The returns of the census show none; but in response to inquiries addressed to the pastors of 2 of the churches claimed by the "Quarterly," the Superintendent was informed that the churches should be classed, one as "Christian" and the other as "Baptist." The third is stated by the "Quarterly" to be located at "Camp Nelson," but, as there is neither town nor post-office by that name in the State of Kentucky, the inquiry could not be prosecuted. It may be assumed, however, that the statement of a church at that place is founded upon a tradition of some local and temporary organization effected during the war at the large and important camp then formed there.

In Arkansas the "Quarterly" reports 2 churches—the census none. For only 1, however, is the post-office address given by the "Quarterly;" and a letter addressed to the pastor of this church was returned to the Census Office by the postmaster, with the information that no church of the denomination existed in that vicinity. In respect to the other, (which the "Quarterly" admits to be without even a "supply,") no inquiry could be instituted, for the reason that no address was given. Instances of this character could be multiplied, but the foregoing will suffice.

It is not doubted that in some cases confusion has arisen in returning the three denominations known in the following tables as Congregational, Unitarian, and Universalist, on account of the common use in some sections, and to a limited extent, of the word "Congregational," as expressing merely the form of church government, without reference to distinctions of theological belief.

UNIVERSALIST.

The denomination last mentioned by name is also reported much below the number claimed by the official organs, by reason probably of the fact that this denomination has a larger proportion of congregations without permanent pastors than any other. For example: for the 16 Universalist churches reported in Missouri, only 1 pastor is, according to the New Covenant (a denominational organ) of February 12, 1870, wholly devoted to the ministry.

Of the 13 Universalist churches reported by the denominational Register and Almanac for 1871 as located in Kansas, only 5 claim to have the use of a church edifice; and of these two are known as "Union." The marshal of the district reports that he can only locate 1.

The discrepancies between the church statistics and the returns of the census in the case of the denominations hitherto specifically referred to, are, as will be seen above, susceptible of explanation.

UNITED BRETHREN IN CHRIST.

But the discrepancies which exist between the claims of the denomination and the statements of the census in respect to the church known as United Brethren in Christ, are wholly inexplicable, except upon an assumption of radical and total vice in the statistics of the church.

The denomination claims 3,753 church organizations. The census allows 1,445.

If the discrepancy were wholly or mainly confined to one or two States, it might seem reasonable to charge it to omissions on the part of the agents of the census. But a comparison of the figures of the census with a statement (a) prepared by the agent of the United Brethren Publishing House, at Dayton, Ohio, (the correctness of the statement being vouched for by one of the bishops of the church,) shows that the claims of the denomination so greatly exceed the figures of the census in every State in which it exists in any considerable strength, as to render it in the highest degree improbable, if not morally impossible, that the differences arise from the uniform negligence of the agents of the census in respect to this single church.

It is undoubtedly true that the erroneous application in some sections, and to a limited extent, of the name "German Methodists," would explain the occasional omission of societies properly belonging to this denomination; but the effect of this cause is not believed to have been considerable at the present census.

Something, also, must be allowed here—more, perhaps, than with denominations generally—for the effect of differing rules of construction as to what constitutes a church, according as the point of view of the denomination, or that of the census, is taken, in dealing with congregations occasionally gathered in school-houses or in private dwellings.

But after all reasonable allowance on these several accounts has been made, the Superintendent is compelled, from a careful examination of the subject, involving an extensive correspondence with the agents of the census, as well as with the officers of the church in question, to conclude that the denominational statistics are radically defective. In addition to the decided presumption in favor of the general correctness of the work of the sworn officers of the Government, to which nothing but assertion has been opposed by the representatives of the denomination, this conclusion is strongly supported by two considerations—

First. That the authorities of the denomination admit that they are unable to locate the churches they claim by towns or even by counties. Had such information been furnished, the investigation into the discrepancies existing would not have been dropped until the whole body of such differences had been canvassed by the Census Office, at whatever expense of time and labor. But the absence of anything approaching specific information regarding the location of these churches not only renders it impossible satisfactorily to determine the question at issue, but casts the greatest doubt upon the authority of the denominational statements.

Second. That the number of church organizations claimed by the authorities of the denomination bears an extraordinary and wholly unprecedented relation to the number of communicants reported. The Baptists average 80 communicants to a church organization; the Methodist Episcopal, 90; the Presbyterians, (North,) 98; the Reformed Church in America, 132, the highest average attained; the Evangelical Association, 74, the lowest. But the official organs of the United Brethren in Christ claim 3,753 churches with only 116,523 communicants, or an average of only 31 to a church. When it is considered that nearly if not quite two-thirds of the communicants of churches are, as a rule, women and minor children, we shall have as an average but 10 to 12 communicants among the adult males bearing the burden of the support of a church of this denomination—a most improbable supposition. But if we assume for the church an average number of communicants equal to that shown by the church having, of all those whose statistics on this subject are available, the smallest number, namely, the Evangelical Association, 74 members, we should have for the 116,523 communicants of the United Brethren in Christ, 1,575 churches, or only 130 in excess of the census. If, on the other hand, we assume for the denomination the average of the Reformed Church in America, viz, 132 communicants, we should have but 883 churches, or 562 below the census. If, again, we assume for the calculation the average of either the Baptist or the Methodist Episcopal Church, we should have a result in the first instance almost exactly coinciding with that exhibited in the following table, and in the second falling considerably below the number actually allowed by the census to the church under consideration.

CHRISTIAN AND DISCIPLES OF CHRIST.

In respect to two denominations, it is admitted that the census fails to make a discrimination required by the facts of the case. From causes, the remedy for which it was not within the power of this office to apply, it became necessary to combine the statistics of the denominations known severally as "Christian" and "Disciples of Christ." The members of the latter denomination, much the stronger of the two, are so frequently termed "Christians," indeed so commonly call themselves by that name, that persons who had not made a study of the subject might readily conclude that the denominations were one and the same, whereas they are, in fact, distinct in official name and style, in organization, and in doctrine.

As an example, not only of the confusion in the popular mind respecting these two churches, but also of the negligence of the officers and members of the several churches in characterizing their own organization and services, it may be mentioned that there is a church belonging to the "Disciples of Christ," within the city of Washington, which is not only commonly, and, indeed, universally spoken of as the "Christian Church," but whose Sunday services are habitually advertised by its own officers in the public prints as those of the "Christian Church," while the edifice in which the congregation worships is inscribed, in conspicuous letters, "Christian Church." It would be wonderful, indeed, when the error is thus daily made by those who should be most interested in maintaining the individuality of the two denominations, if the agents of the census had been found to have preserved the distinction.

Had each or either of these denominations been mainly confined to a distinct section of the Union, special efforts might have resulted in an approximate classification of the data furnished by the assistant marshals. But, in view of the fact that both bodies have their greatest strength in the same States, and oftentimes in the same quarter of the same State, and in view also of the frankly acknowledged inability of the officials of each denomination to whom application for assistance was made, to render any practical aid, it was deemed best to follow the precedent established in 1850 and 1860 of merging the two denominations under a single title.

The results here given are believed to present a fair statement of the combined strength of the two denominations.

One of the leading divines of the "Christians" gives the following estimate for that denomination as a whole in the United States, in answer to the inquiries of the Census Office, viz: church organizations, 1,100; church edifices, 1,050; church accommodation, 100,000; value of church property, $735,000.
