[1] Except for the aggregate, the four ten-year age periods corresponding to the most active period of life only are presented in this bulletin. The full data will be shown in the annual report. Only occupations with at least 1,000 deaths are shown, and age groups having less than 200 deaths from all causes are distinguished by italics.

[1] The index is the percentage obtained by dividing the per cent which deaths from the given cause form of deaths from all causes for all occupations into the corresponding per cent for the specified occupation. It shows, for example, that at the age period 25 to 34 years the per cent of deaths from typhoid fever in professional service (7.5) is 127.1 per cent of the per cent of deaths from typhoid fever in all occupations (5.9). Only occupations with at least 1,000 deaths are shown, and age groups having less than 200 deaths from all causes are distinguished by italics.

[1] The index is the percentage obtained by dividing the per cent which deaths from the given cause form of deaths from all causes for all occupations into the corresponding per cent for the specified occupation. It shows, for example, that at the age period 25 to 34 years the per cent of deaths from typhoid fever in professional service (7.5) is 127.1 per cent of the per cent of deaths from typhoid fever in all occupations (5.9). Only occupations with at least 1,000 deaths are shown, and age groups having less than 200 deaths from all causes are distinguished by italics.

Occupied males (agricultural districts)	48

Of the 98 other occupational groups the mortality of 34 was above, that of 1 equal to, and that of 63 below the mortality of "occupied males."

EXPLANATORY NOTE ON TABLE 12.—The meaning of the term "comparative mortality figure" is thus explained in the Supplement (page xi): "In the course of the three years 1900-02 there were registered 284,009 deaths of males between the ages of 25 and 65 years, and these deaths occurred in the course of 20,166,153 years of life—a number equal to thrice the population enumerated at these ages at the time of the last Census. Thus, among males generally, within these age limits, 1,000 deaths occurred annually among 71,005 living; and if this latter number be divided proportionally to the numbers enumerated in the latter Census, it will be found that 26,259 of them were living at ages 25-35 years, 20,407 at ages 35-45 years, 14,748 at ages 45-55 years, and 9,591 at ages 55-65 years. This number (71,005) has been adopted as the 'standard population,' which, subject to the rates of mortality obtained in the several age groups among males generally, produced 1,000 deaths annually. If the four constituent numbers above mentioned be multiplied by the death rates recorded at the corresponding age groups in each occupation, the sum of the products will give the number of deaths that would occur in the standard population, supposing it to have experienced the death rates which prevailed in that occupation. This figure is called the 'comparative mortality figure' for the occupation." The italics are used in the English tables for a purpose different from that for which they were employed in Tables 6 to 11; they denote groups of occupations or localized or other subdivisions of some of the numbered occupations of the English list.
