NUMBER OF INHABITANTS

Population of American Samoa.—American Samoa was acquired by the United States in accordance with a convention between the United States, Great Britain, and Germany, signed December 2, 1899, ratified February 16, 1900, and proclaimed by the President of the United States on the latter date. Under an Executive order of February 19, 1900, the islands were placed under the authority of the Secretary of the Navy for use as a naval station. The high chiefs of the Tutuila voluntarily ceded the islands of Tutuila and Aunu'u to the United States on April 17, 1900; and the islands of the Manua group (Tau, Olosega, and Ofu) were ceded by their high chiefs on July 16, 1904. By joint resolution of Congress, approved March 4, 1925, Swains Island was annexed to American Samoa.

The population of American Samoa on April 1, 1940, according to the Sixteenth Census, was 12,908, which represents an increase of 2,853, or 28.4 percent, as compared with the population of 10,055 on April 1, 1930. The total land area of American Samoa is 76 square miles. The average number of inhabitants per square mile in 1940 was 169.8, as compared with 132.3 in 1930.

Table 1 shows the population of American Samoa from 1900, the year in which the first census was taken, to 1940, together with the increase during each intercensal period. Local censuses of population were taken by the naval governors in 1900 and 1912. In 1920, 1930, and 1940 the population of the islands was enumerated in conjunction with the regular decennial censuses of the United States, the field work being done under the supervision of the naval governor in accordance with plans prescribed by the Director of the Census. Capt. Edward W. Hansen, United States Navy, who was governor in April 1940, was in charge of the Sixteenth Census canvass of American Samoa.

Districts and islands.—American Samoa is divided into four districts: Manua District, comprising Ofu, Olosega, and Tau Islands; the Eastern District of Tutuila Island, which also includes Aunu'u Island; the Western District of Tutuila Island; and Swains Island. Table 2 shows the population of these four districts from 1920 to 1940, and also the population of the individual islands. Rose Island, a coral atoll included in the American Samoa group, was uninhabited in 1940.

NUMBER OF INHABITANTS

Population of Guam.—The island of Guam was ceded by Spain to the United States under the terms of the Treaty of Paris, signed December 10, 1898, and ratified in April 1899.

The population of Guam on April 1, 1940, according to the Sixteenth Census, was 22,290, which represents an increase of 3,781, or 20.4 percent as compared with the population of 18,509 on April 1, 1930. The total land area of Guam is 203 square miles. The average number of inhabitants per square mile in 1940 was 109.8, as compared with 91.2 in 1930.

Table 1 shows the population of Guam from 1901, the year in which the first census was taken, to 1940, and of Agaña city from 1920 to 1940, together with the increase during each intercensal period. Local censuses of population were taken by the naval governors in 1901 and 1910. In 1920, 1930, and 1940 the population of the island was enumerated in conjunction with the regular decennial censuses of the United States, the field work being done under the supervision of the naval governor in accordance with plans prescribed by the Director of the Census. Capt. James T. Alexander, United States Navy, who was governor in April 1940, was in charge of the Sixteenth Census canvass of Guam.

Municipalities.—Table 2 shows the population in 1940 of the 15 municipalities which are the principal administrative units of Guam. Because of redistricting between 1930 and 1940, it is not possible to show comparative figures for 1930 for all of these municipalities.

⁹ Includes 213 persons reported on United States naval vessels in Apra Harbor.

Minor civil divisions.—The municipalities of Guam are divided into towns and barrios, with the exception of Agaña municipality, which is coextensive with Agaña city. Agaña, which had a population in 1940 of 10,004, is divided into districts. Table 3 shows the 1940 population of Agaña city by districts and of the other municipalities by towns and barrios. Figures for 1930 are not presented because of numerous changes in boundaries between 1930 and 1940.

PANAMA CANAL ZONE

NUMBER OF INHABITANTS

Population of the Canal Zone.—The United States acquired sovereignty over the area now constituting the Panama Canal Zone, under the terms of a treaty with the Republic of Panama, signed November 18, 1903.

The population of the Panama Canal Zone on April 1, 1940, according to the Sixteenth Census, was 51,827, which represents an increase of 12,360, or 31.3 percent, as compared with the population of 39,467 on April 1, 1930. The gross area of the Canal Zone is 553 square miles, comprising 362 square miles of land and 191 square miles of water. The average number of inhabitants per square mile of land area in 1940, as shown in table 2, was 143.2, as compared with 109.0 in 1930.

Table 1 shows the population of the Panama Canal Zone from 1912 to 1940, together with the increase or decrease during each intercensal period. The first census of the Canal Zone was taken as of February 1, 1912, by the Department of Civil Administration of the Isthmian Canal Commission. In 1920, 1930, and 1940 the population of the Canal Zone was enumerated in conjunction with the regular decennial censuses of the United States, the field work being done under the supervision of the Governor in accordance with plans prescribed by the Director of the Census. Brig. Gen. Clarence S. Ridley, United States Army, who was governor in April 1940, was in charge of the Sixteenth Census canvass of the Canal Zone.

Canal Zone employees living in the Republic of Panama are not included in the enumeration, since all persons are enumerated at their usual places of abode, i. e., the places where they regularly sleep. According to the annual report of the Governor of the Panama Canal Zone for the fiscal year 1939, approximately 700 American citizens and 5,000 aliens, employees of the Panama Canal and the Panama Railroad, were living outside of the Canal Zone.

In tables 1 to 3 the population of the Panama Canal Zone is shown by residence in civil and military areas. The military area is that area lying within the several military and naval reservations, radio stations, etc., maintained by the military and naval forces of the United States. The remainder of the Canal Zone, lying outside of the military area, is designated as the civil area.

Court districts.—The Canal Zone has no county organization, but is divided into court districts, which are treated for census purposes as equivalent to county areas. Table 2 shows the population of the two court districts of the Panama Canal Zone from 1920 to 1940, together with the land area of each district and its population per square mile in 1940. This table also presents the population of the civil and military areas of each district from 1920 to 1940. In 1937 part of Cristobal district was annexed to Balboa district, and there have been numerous changes in the civil and military areas. The figures shown for each year relate to the area as constituted at that time.

Minor geographic divisions.—Table 3 shows the population of each court district, for civil and military areas, and by towns, rural areas, institutions, and military and naval reservations. Between 1930 and 1940 there were a large number of changes in the boundaries of these minor geographic divisions, and for that reason corresponding figures are not presented for 1930.

VIRGIN ISLANDS OF THE UNITED STATES

MUNICIPALITIES AND CITIES

VIRGIN ISLANDS OF THE UNITED STATES

NUMBER OF INHABITANTS

Population of the Virgin Islands.—The Virgin Islands of the United States, formerly known as the Danish West Indies, were acquired by the United States by purchase from Denmark in 1917, the formal transfer of possession having taken place on March 31 of that year. St. Croix, St. John, and St. Thomas are the three principal islands of the group, although there are 65 smaller islands, most of which are uninhabited.

The population on April 1, 1940, according to the Sixteenth Census, was 24,889, which represents an increase of 2,877, or 13.1 percent, as compared with the population of 22,012 on April 1, 1930. The total land area of the Virgin Islands, as shown in table 3, is 132 square miles. The average number of inhabitants per square mile in 1940 was 188.6, as compared with 166.8 in 1930.

Table 1 shows the population of the Virgin Islands from 1835 to 1940, together with the increase or decrease during each intercensal period. The figures published for the period from 1835 to 1911 are from censuses taken by the Danish Government. A special census was taken as of November 1, 1917, under the supervision of the Bureau of the Census, and in 1930 and 1940 the population of the islands was enumerated in conjunction with the regular decennial censuses of the United States, the field work being done under the supervision of the Governor in accordance with plans prescribed by the Director of the Census. Robert M. Lovett, who was acting governor in April 1940, was in charge of the Sixteenth Census canvass of the Virgin Islands.

The urban population of the Virgin Islands consists of those persons living in the three cities of Charlotte Amalie, Christiansted, and Frederiksted, the remainder of the population being classified as rural. (Frederiksted, which had a population of 2,498 in 1940, fell slightly below the limit of 2,500 set for urban classification in the continental United States, but was classified as urban because its population had been greater than 2,500 prior to 1940.)

Cities.—Table 2 shows the population of the three cities of the Virgin Islands at each census from 1835 to 1940, together with the increase or decrease during each decade. Charlotte Amalie, the largest city and the capital of the Virgin Islands, had a population in 1940 of 9,801.

Municipalities.—Table 3 shows the population from 1917 to 1940 of the two municipalities which are the major administrative units of the Virgin Islands, together with the land area of each municipality and its population per square mile in 1940. Figures are shown separately for the two islands which make up the municipality of St. Thomas and St. John. (Figures for these islands include the population of the small outlying islands.) This table also presents the urban and rural population of each municipality and island for 1940 and 1930.

Minor geographic divisions.—The municipalities of the Virgin Islands are divided into cities and quarters. Charlotte Amalie, the largest city, is also divided into quarters. Table 4 shows the population of municipalities by islands, cities, and quarters for the last three censuses.
