State and local governments use the results of the census to plan and provide community services, design public facilities, allocate federal funds, and develop a better understanding of their residents. The Census Bureau continues to work with the states and localities to improve the data available for this purpose, including producing more detailed and timely data, and exploring more innovative ways to gather information.